

Registration requirements LVSC register organisational coaches

To be registered as an Organisational Coach at LVSC, one must be an LVSC association member.

Registration requirements LVSC register organisational coach:

1. The training followed is (partly) aimed at training Organisational Coaches and is sufficiently appropriate within the described LVSC narrative for Organisational coaches. You can find more information about the narrative for organisational coaches on the website. The study load of a course recognised by LVSC is at least 350 hours, at least 130 contact hours. A diploma from an LVSC-recognised organisational coaching course is allowed. You can find an overview of the recognised training courses for Organisational Coaching and the requirements set for these training courses on the LVSC website.
2. Organisational coaches who do not comply with 1.1. but have become an organisational coach through acquired competencies, can eventually apply to participate in a 'welcome meeting' with two registered members who are active in the field of organisational coaching. The structure of these welcome meetings comes from the Organisational Coaches design group (Amersfoort, 19 November 2019). In 2021 these will be further developed and take on a definite form on behalf of the board. Keep an eye on the LVSC website for this.

Since organisational coaching is a relatively new profession for which there are still few training courses, many organisational coaches are working with acquired competencies. To grant these organisational coaches access as a registered organisational coach within the LVSC organisational supervision domain, until further notice, 'a welcome meeting' with other registered LVSC members is how the board would like to investigate as a pilot as a different route.

Registration validity

Each registration is valid for five years. After that, the organisational coach must request a re-registration and have it verified. The purpose of this re-registration is to stimulate the organisational coaches' further development.
